It's the Top Ten list no one wants to be on.

Moments after the feds busted Ghislaine Maxwell Thursday for allegedly roping in underage girls for pal Jeffrey Epstein's perverted pleasure, fireworks started going off in the lives of certain billionaires and playboys who palled around with the two.

And not the happy Fourth of July kind.

Since no one was closer to the multimillionaire pedophile than Maxwell, whose network stretched from New York to France, Israel, Buckingham Palace and the Caribbean, those in the know are undoubtedly fretting over the dirt she could dish to keep herself out of jail.

Particularly after prosecutors vowed to "bring justice" to other potential enablers of Epstein's sex abuse and trafficking.

A friend, TV host Christopher Mason, said he believes she had access to videotapes from all of Epstein's properties — and the footage has gone missing.

"I'm sure she has access to the videos," Mason said. "A lot of powerful people will be more than a little worried."

So who among Epstein's infamous black book will need a good lawyer if "G-Max" — the alias Maxwell used when moving around money — starts singing?

At the top of the list are the usual scandal magnets, Prince Andrew, Bill Clinton and Alan Dershowitz. They all hung around with Epstein, but each has a history of slithering out of Billionaire hedge fund owner Glenn Dubin, for example, who is one half of an accomplished Manhattan super-couple: His striking wife, Dr. Eva Andersson-Dubin, founded the Dubin Breast Center of the Tisch Cancer Institute at the Mount Sinai Medical Center.

They have three children and live a life of glossy luxury, all private chefs and private jets, with homes in Palm Beach, Westchester County, Sweden and a ranch in Gunnison, Colorado.

But Dubin's friendship with Epstein and Maxwell ran deep.

His wife dated Epstein for a few years before she married Dubin in 1994, and Andersson-Dubin stuck up for the perv predator after his 2008 conviction on prostitution charges, saying she was “100% comfortable with Jeffrey Epstein around my children,” who were minors at the time.

The Dubins flatly deny assertions by sex-abuse victim Virginia Roberts Giuffre, who in a 2016 deposition claimed Maxwell sent her to have sex with Dubin after her “training.”

There's also the beautiful, high-flying countess whom investigators reportedly want to question in the wake of Maxwell's arrest.

Clare Hazell, now known as the Countess of Iveagh, was once just a regular, under-the-radar Ohio State University student (albeit with tuition reportedly paid by Epstein). Then she married Edward Guinness of the famed brewing family in 2001.

Hazell, 44, could be of interest to prosecutors because she worked for Epstein in the 1990s and flew on his Lolita Express jet at least 32 times between 1998 and 2000. She could have witnessed Maxwell's dealings with other wealthy pals.

Larry Summers, Sheryl Sandberg's one-time mentor and the former Harvard president, helped bolster Epstein's reputation, taking $30 million from the multimillionaire to create Harvard's Epstein Program for Mathematical Biology and Evolutionary Dynamics, according to Slate.

Epstein reportedly only agreed to have his name attached after being persuaded by Summers himself.

Summers appeared in Lolita Express flight logs, and Epstein's private charity funded a nonprofit that produces a TV show hosted by Summers' wife, the Daily Beast reported last year.

Married politician Ehud Barak, 77, the former prime minister of Israel, has watched current Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu beat back seemingly every accusation and political challenge, while Barak's ties to Epstein dog him constantly.

Barak found himself targeted by Netanyahu, who has tweeted articles and photographs of Barak exiting Epstein's townhouse in 2016.

He once said he met Epstein "more than 10 times and much less than a hundred times, but I can't tell you exactly how many. I don't keep count. Over the years, I've seen him on occasion."

Barak admitted that he visited Epstein at two of his New York homes and flew to Epstein's notorious Pedophile Island hideaway once, though he denied participating in any sex parties or orgies at the swanky retreat.

Leslie Wexner, the billionaire owner of Victoria's Secret, has never been charged with anything. But one has to wonder why the titan would reportedly hire Epstein, who was then little more than a glorified former high school math teacher with just a few years on Wall Street, as his financial adviser in 1987, and then give him power of attorney over his fortune.

"It's a weird relationship," a Wall Streeter who reportedly knew Epstein told New York Magazine at the time. "It's just not typical for someone of such enormous wealth to all of a sudden give his money to some guy most people have never heard of."

To his credit, Wexner pulled the plug on their connection in 2007, saying, "I would not have continued to work with any individual capable of such egregious, sickening behavior as has

A representative for Wexner called The Post after a reporter left messages regarding his client's ties to Epstein, but declined to comment further.

He was smoother than some reps for boldface names who sounded uncharacteristically desperate when reached by The Post, alternately threatening legal action and begging not to be mentioned in print.

Former New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson, 72, and former US Sen. George Mitchell, 86, probably never envisioned being part of a sex scandal so late in their lives and careers.

In Mitchell's case, the irony was supreme. He was known for overseeing the Philadelphia Archdiocese compensation fund for victims of clergy sex abuse in 2018.

Richardson would rather be remembered for pushing through the world's first purpose-built spaceport when he was governor.

Now the two are doing all they can to distance themselves from Epstein, especially after the arrest Thursday of Maxwell in the tiny town of Bradford, NH, where she was living in a luxurious, multimillion-dollar hideaway in the woods.

Both have denied claims by Giuffre that she was "instructed" by Epstein and Maxwell to have sex with them, including one incident in which she said she gave Mitchell a sexual massage at Epstein's mansion in Palm Beach, where her "body was put on the banquet menu."

"I have never met, spoken with or had any contact with Ms. Giuffre," Mitchell told Fox News last summer.

"In my contacts with Mr. Epstein I never observed or suspected any inappropriate conduct with underage girls. I only learned of his actions when they were reported in the media related to his prosecution in Florida. We have had no further contact."
